Why do we need Health & Safety Advice and Services?

Health and Safety Advice and Services are necessary for the following reasons:

- Identification of issues: If there are underlying problems that are not being addressed, there is a high possibility this will lead to accidents, health and safety breaches or fines. For an organisation, this needs to be avoided at all costs. A health and safety audit will suggest appropriate control measures that will be required to be put in place, resulting in a new safer working environment.
- Business Development: If you are tendering for new business you will find that most organisations expect you to have the appropriate health and safety advice and monitoring procedures in place. This will improve the organisation's health and safety culture, boost public relations and benefit your business goals.

- Legal Obligations and responsibilities: There are many regulations and laws in place to ensure safety and wellbeing to all employees, visitors and members of the public within different industries and it is best practice to show that your organisation has the appropriate health and safety systems, policies and procedures in place. Ensuring you have the proper regulations in place and eliminating the risk of injury in the workplace will benefit you and your employees.

What happens if my business is investigated?

- An investigation by the Health & Safety Executive into workplace accidents can be intrusive and disruptive. An investigation can include a review of written records, an inspection of where the incident took place or the subject of the complaint and interviews with duty holders and staff.
- Our Health & Safety specialists have commercial sense and specialist knowledge which will ensure that the right decisions are taken by you at each stage of an investigation.

We are available at short notice to advise when an incident occurs. Sherrards is not an insurance panel firm, so you can rest assured we have your best interests at heart.
